Hatfield Historical Society – Foxfire Reports

Box Folder

The Foxfire Reports were a series of class assignments given to Jr. High and Sr. High school students within the Hatfield public school system from 1982 until 2000. Each student or pair of students researched and wrote about a topic relating to Hatfield, Massachusetts. Most of the authors incorporated primary documents and personal interviews into their reports. Both primary source materials and personal interviews have been documented in this finding aid to assist researchers.

This collection documents a wide variety of topics of interest to scholars of Hatfield, Massachusetts, agriculture in New England, and World War II. The interviews with individuals in the People series offer a rich documentation on mid-20th century life in New England, and the projects on the earliest families who settled Hatfield provide a deeper historical context for the town.

Arrangement:

The files in this collection are organized into three series: People, Places, and Subjects. The files within the People series are arranged alphabetically by last name, or by family name if there are reports on multiple family members. Within the Place series, the files are arranged alphabetically by location. The files within the Subject series include all topics not covered by People or Place, including businesses, events, organizations, and industries. The files are listed alphabetically; if multiple files with the same title exist, they are listed chronologically.

*Seven missing Foxfire reports added to this inventory Jan. 17, 2017, by Hannah Zahn, researched by Wayne Schlegel. They are numbered as follows, example: Folder 103.5.

On-going expansions of listings being done by Wayne Schlegel and Wunderley Stauder.
